

Mike Hunt threw a party because, frankly, Mike Hunt was feeling a little lonely.

Anita Bath brought bubbles, though she admitted she preferred a good, long soak to small talk.

Hugh Jass arrived with a cake so enormous that everyone wanted a piece.

Phil McCracken popped the bubbly, and the whole room agreed he had excellent timing.

During hide-and-seek, everybody searched for Mike Hunt, but nobody could find him in the bush.

Anita asked for a stiff one, and Mike handed her a cocktail that could stand up by itself.

Hugh shook his Jass so hard that even the disco ball blushed.

By midnight, Mike Hunt had been found, Hugh's Jass had been admired, and everyone went home thoroughly satisfied.
